Headline: Palestinian ambassador to the UN denounces illegal Israeli settlements

Palestinian ambassador to the United Nations (UN) Riad Mansur said on Friday (3rd) that the Israeli regime has demonstrated on numerous occasions that they prefer the expansion of Jewish settlements instead of peace and security. The construction on Palestinian land has been constantly criticized, even by allies of Israel, as detrimental to a "peace process" that the United States says they want to resume. Through three letters addressed to the Secretary-General, Ban Ki-Moon, the President of the Security Council and UN General Assembly President of this international entity, Mansur strongly criticized the ongoing construction of Israeli settlements, describing it as "a violation of international standards and a disregard of the will of the international community."

Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas has given U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry two more weeks, until June 20, to receive a clearly formulated offer to renew negotiations before the Palestinians resume their unilateral moves at the United Nations, a senior Israeli official has told Haaretz. The official said that the Palestinians informed Kerry a few weeks ago that they would wait until June 7 to receive a proposal from him, but over the past few days Kerry spoke with Abbas twice in order to buy more time to reach a formula that would jump-start the talks. The Israeli official said that Abbas had tried to demand that Kerry obtain gestures from Israel in exchange for the two additional weeks, such as the release of a few Palestinian prisoners. Kerry rejected the Palestinian demand outright, and Abbas withdrew it. Kerry said Monday in a speech in Washington that the coming days are critical for the future of the Israeli-Palestinian peace process. Kerry intends to arrive in Israel on Tuesday to hold another round of talks – the fifth – with both sides.

Headline: Israel Signals Readiness to Consider Land Swap

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu signaled readiness on Wednesday to consider a 2002 Arab peace plan whose terms were recently softened to include possible land swaps between Israel and the Palestinians. "We are listening to every initiative - the Arab initiative has been mentioned - and we are prepared to discuss initiatives that are proposals and not edicts," he said in a speech in parliament. Echoing previous Israeli leaders, Netanyahu has ruled out a return to pre-1967 war frontiers, calling them indefensible. But a month ago, Arab states appeared to soften the 2002 plan when Sheik Hamad bin Jassim al-Thani, Qatar's prime minister and foreign minister, said Israel and the Palestinians could trade land rather than conform exactly to the 1967 lines. Netanyahu, who heads the right-wing Likud party, has never endorsed the idea of territorial exchange publicly. A 2009 U.S. diplomatic cable released by Wikileaks in 2010 said he expressed support for the concept in a meeting with U.S. legislators. In his address to the legislature, Netanyahu repeated a call to Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas to return unconditionally to peace talks that collapsed in 2010 over continued Israeli settlement building on occupied land.

Headline: Dramatic increase in stone-throwing incidents on Jews in east Jerusalem

According to The Guardian, the Palestinian Authority has bound its survival to John Kerry's peace effort, warning that if the US Secretary of State's campaign to draw Israeli and PA Arab leaders back to the negotiating table fails, the West Bank could fall to radicalism and violence. The Palestinian chief negotiator, Saeb Erekat, said Israel's refusal to agree to even a basic agenda for peace threatened to scupper the Kerry initiative and the credibility of the Palestinian Authority's policy of non-violence, says The Guardian. In fact, MI submitted a recent report to the IDF with abundant evidence that the PA is very busy inciting to violence already, providing funds, infrastructure and PR to fuel the recent wave of rock and firebomb terror plus rampant rioting across Yesha.

Headline: PA Arabs Fete 'New Mahdi,' Establishment of Caliphate

Thousands of PA Arabs participated in a mass rally in Ramallah earlier this week calling for the establishment of the Muslim Caliphate – the worldwide Islamist government that will “bring the coming of the Mahdi,” the Muslim messiah. The Caliphate is essentially a union of Muslim countries under the spiritual and political leadership of a single individual, the Caliph. It has been an Islamic concept since the days of Muhammad, when it was established by several of his disciples. The office of “official Caliph” has been disputed at times, with rival would-be Caliphs battling each other for the title. With many Muslim states politically and religiously divided, and dependent on the West for support, radical Islamists have been pushing for the reestablishment of the Caliphate – this time to be led by the all-powerful Mahdi, who will unite all Muslims and establish Islam as the dominant religion in the world, ruling for several years before the "Day of Judgment". Although the identity of the Mahdi is a secret, many Islamists believe that he is alive now, and several individuals have claimed the title. Many Islamists were said to have believed that Osama Bin-Laden was the Mahdi, or his right-hand man, until he was killed several years ago by U.S. forces in Afghanistan.

Headline: Palestinians mark Nakseh demanding 1967 borders

Headline: Abbas: Palestinians Will Never Give Up on Jerusalem

Palestinian officials marked 46 years since the start of the 1967 war with Israel on Wednesday by insisting any peace talks must be based on the lines that existed before Israel's occupation.

Chief Palestinian peace negotiator Saeb Erekat visited three villages in the West Bank whose populations fled the Israeli invasion during the Arab-Israeli war against the armies of Egypt, Jordan and Syria. Israeli forces occupied Gaza, the West Bank and East Jerusalem during the conflict, with Palestinians mourning it as the "Nakseh" or setback. "The [same] fate of the 5,000 Palestinians who were evicted from these villages" in June 1967 still befalls Palestinians in the West Bank today, he told reporters on a stop in the village of Yalu. The demolition of Yalu, Imwas and Beit Nuba back then was now being repeated "in Jericho, Nablus and everywhere else" in the West Bank, he lamented, citing the destruction of houses by the Israeli army, which expels hundreds of Palestinian families from their homes in areas under its control each year. "Why did the Israelis evict those people in 1967? Simply because they wanted to declare the borders," Erekat said.

Headline: Syria's chemical weapons program was built to counter Israel

Headline: France says Sarin gas used several times in Syria

Headline: Britain says samples from Syria test positive for sarin

Syria, defeated by Israel in three wars and afraid its arch enemy had gained a nuclear arsenal, began in earnest to build a covert chemical weapons program three decades ago, aided by its neighbors, allies and European chemical wholesalers. Damascus lacked the technology and scientific capacity to set up a program on its own, but with backing from foreign allies it amassed what is believed to be one of the deadliest stockpiles of nerve agent in the world, Western military experts said. "Syria was quite heavily reliant on outside help at the outset of its chemical weapons program, but the understanding now is that they have a domestic chemical weapons production capability," said Amy Smithson of the James Martin Center for Nonproliferation Studies in Washington, an expert on nuclear, biological and chemical weapons. As Syria's civil war enters its third year with 80,000 dead, chemical weapons are reported to have been used by the government of President Bashar al-Assad, and there are also fears they could fall into the hands of militants seeking to destabilize the region.

The Syrian regime army has the green light to respond to any future Israeli attack without referring back to its "leadership," a Syrian lawmaker has told a Lebanese television, saying warning that Syria is ready for an "open war." "Next time, if Israel dares to breach the Syrian airspace, next time, there are orders to retaliate with fire and missiles without referring back to the leadership," Ahmad Shalash told al-Mayadeen television. "Let it all out, they want an open war, let it be an open war, we don't have a problem." He added. Shalash vowed that the Syrian regime army will continue to fight for embattled President Assad to "the ends of world."

Two mortar shells fell Wednesday in a field near Israel's northern border with Syria in the Golan Heights, south of the town of Majdal Shams. ### Jordan

Headline: Large US Marine force lands in Aqaba to deploy on Jordanian-Syrian border

Headline: Russia Slams US Patriot Plans for Jordan

A large American military force disembarked Tuesday, June 4, at the southern Jordanian port of Aqaba - ready for deployment on the kingdom's Syrian border, debkafile's exclusive military sources report. The force made its way north along the Aqaba-Jerash-Ajilon mountain road bisecting Jordan from south to north, under heavy Jordanian military escort. Our sources disclose that this American force numbers 1,000 troops, the largest to land in Jordan since the Syrian civil war erupted in March 2012. They are members of the 24th Marine Expeditionary Force carried aboard the USS Kearsage amphibious assault ship, which has been anchored off neighboring Israeli Eilat since mid-May. Upon landing, the marines took to the road in a convoy of armored vehicles including Hummers.

Washington and Amman have imposed a blackout on their arrival. The Pentagon has only let it be known that the annual joint US-Jordanian "Eager Lion 2013" military exercise is due to begin later in June and last two months, with the participation of US F-16 fighter jets and Patriot missile defense systems.

Lebanon

Headline: 'We're Heading for Repeat of the Second Lebanon War'

The IDF Chief of Staff's decision to slash training and three-week tours of duty for military reservists has caused anger and concern among activists dedicated to avoiding a repeat of the Second Lebanon War. Training was cut due to a reduction in the Defense Department's annual budget. "I want to believe this is just a game of chicken between the Defense Ministry and the Finance Ministry, because if not, this is very similar to what happened in the Second Lebanon War and the Yom Kippur War," activist Moshe Muskal of the National Responsibility group told Arutz Sheva. "Things were quiet for a little while, so they said, 'Let's put the equipment away, let's cancel exercises,' and when the day came, they found that things were missing [from the warehouses] and the brigade commanders didn't quite remember what they were supposed to do in a brigade exercise," he explained. Training and drills for reserve soldiers were slashed during the years prior to the 2006 Second Lebanon War and reservists complained that they were ill-prepared to fight to their maximum ability. In the aftermath of the war, sparked by the kidnapping of two IDF soldiers by the Hizbullah, IDF Maj. General Moshe Kaplinsky wrote "the bulk of the regular forces were diverted to continuous fighting against terrorism and major resources were not diverted to long term growth in power at the expense of neglecting the war reserve stores. The Northern Command was... considered a secondary front".

Headline: British push to blacklist Hezbollah hits EU opposition

Headline: Arab League condemns Hezbollah's role in Syria

A British request to blacklist the armed wing of Hezbollah ran into opposition in the European Union on Tuesday, with several governments expressing concern that such a move would increase instability in the Middle East. Britain has argued that the militant Shi'ite Muslim group should face European sanctions because of evidence that it was behind a bus bombing in Bulgaria last July that killed five Israelis and their driver. Hezbollah denies any involvement. London has also cited a four-year jail sentence handed down by a Cypriot court in March to a Hezbollah member accused of plotting to attack Israeli interests on the island. Blacklisting the group would mark a major policy shift for the European Union, which has resisted pressure from Israel and Washington to do so for years. But at a meeting in Brussels, convened to weigh the British request, several EU governments questioned whether there was sufficient evidence to link Hezbollah to the attack in Bulgaria, according to EU diplomats. Meanwhile, The Arab League on Wednesday condemned the military intervention in Syria by the Lebanese Shi'ite militant group Hezbollah, Arab League Secretary General Nabil Elaraby said. A resolution issued after a meeting of Arab League foreign ministers in Cairo expressed "strong condemnation" of all forms of foreign intervention, especially that by Hezbollah, he said.

Headline: Idriss: Syria rebels ready to move battles into Lebanon

Salim Idriss, the commander of the Syrian rebel forces, warned Wednesday that fighters seeking to oust President Bashar Assad could target Hezbollah in Lebanon if authorities failed to put a stop to the resistance group's activities in Syria. "The fighters are ready to move the battles into Lebanon to confront Hezbollah members fighting alongside the Syrian regime forces,” the Free Syrian Army commander told BBC. “The Syrian opposition will have to take necessary measures if the Lebanese authorities fail to end Hezbollah’s interference in Syria battles,” he added. The remarks of Idriss came as Syrian rebels conceded defeat to Hezbollah-backed regime troops in the Homs town of Qusair early Wednesday. The Syrian commander also said that “there are now a very large number of Hezbollah fighters in Syria’s Qusair, Aleppo and Damascus.”

Headline: Israel Builds Sinai Border Fence; Illegal Crossings Drop 99.9%

This week, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has touted the success of a new border fence that Israel built along its boundary with Egypt to stop illegal infiltrators. In a statement posted at his government website, Netanyahu reported that illegal crossings had declined 99.9%, from 2,000 per month to only two. "The fence that we built in the south is achieving the result for which it was erected," Netanyahu said. "As opposed to the over 2,000 infiltrators who entered Israel exactly one year ago and dispersed to various cities, in May 2013 exactly two infiltrators crossed the border and were detained. Now we need to focus on repatriating the illegal infiltrators who are here, and we will meet this task as well."

Headline: Egypt warns ‘all options open’ on Ethiopia dam

Egypt will demand that Ethiopia stop construction of a Nile River dam and warned “all options are open” if it harms its water supply, advisers to President Mohamed Morsi said on Wednesday.

“It is Egypt’s right to defend its interests,” said Ayman Ali, one of Morsi’s advisers, in comments carried by the official MENA news agency. “Other people have a right to seek their own interests. But there must be guarantees that the Ethiopian dam will not harm Egypt, otherwise all options are open,” he added. Presidential adviser Pakinam El Sharkawy said Egypt would demand that the upstream country end its construction of the dam. The presidency has said the dam is a “national security” issue for Egypt. “Demanding of Ethiopia to stop construction of the dam it intends to build on the Blue Nile will be our first step,” MENA quoted her as saying.

Jeremiah 49:24-27

New King James Version (NKJV)

- 24 Damascus has grown feeble;
She turns to flee,
And fear has seized her.
Anguish and sorrows have taken her like a woman in labor.
- 25 Why is the city of praise not deserted, the city of My joy?
- 26 Therefore her young men shall fall in her streets,
And all the men of war shall be cut off in that day,” says the LORD of hosts.
- 27 “I will kindle a fire in the wall of Damascus,
And it shall consume the palaces of Ben-Hadad.”<sup>[a]</sup>

The burden of Damascus. Behold, Damascus is taken away from being a city, and it shall be a ruinous heap.

— Isaiah 17:1 (KJV)

Syria

Headline: North Korea sends officers to aid Assad

In another bizarre twist to Syria's tragic civil war, opposition forces are now claiming that officers from the North Korean army are aiding the fight against the rebels in an effort to bolster Bashar al-Assad.

According to a "Syrian human rights center", a few of Assad's civilian militia fighters revealed the presence of the North Korean officers in the war zones. The Syrian regime has long-claimed that among the rebels fighting it across the country there are many fighters from overseas, sent by "Syria's enemies" such as Saudi Arabia, Israel and the United States of America. But Assad also no longer denies the use of foreign fighters himself, with the recent revelation that Lebanese, Hezbollah forces and even Iranian forces are assisting Assad. It has also been reported that Russian arms are being used by Syria's regime, with Putin's government apparently keen to supply more. The North Korean twist however lends a new element to the conflict, further entrenching the Western allies of the US, Europe, Israel and Great Britain against the so-called 'axis of evil' in Iran, Syria and North Korea assisted by Russia.

Headline: Syrian rebels deny loss of Qusair

Syrian troops advanced toward the center of the strategic town of Qusair near the border with Lebanon and chased rebels from another key district on the edge of Damascus on Tuesday, officials said, solidifying gains that have shifted the balance of power in the regime's favor in recent weeks. In the past two months, the Syrian army has moved steadily against rebels in key battleground areas, making advances near the border with Lebanon and considerably lowering the threat to Damascus, the seat of President Bashar Assad's government. The Syrian army, which is backed by Hezbollah fighters, is "approaching victory" in Qusair, almost three weeks after launching an offensive to recapture the western town, an official in the governor's office of Homs province said. He said the troops are advancing from the east and south of Qusair, fighting pockets of resistance along the way. The rebels still have control of the western and northern parts of the town as well as some areas in the center.

Russia is investigating whether shells that landed in Damascus, Syria, were intended to kill employees at its embassy, a Foreign Ministry spokesman says. Alexander Lukashovich said officials want to determine if the attacks were "deliberate actions aimed against Russian nationals and the interests of Syria," RIA Novosti reported Wednesday. Five shells hit the al-Adwi district of the Syrian capital where the Russian Embassy is located. No one at the embassy was injured, but a civilian was killed and a Syrian security officer injured. During the weekend, Russia blocked a U.N. resolution drafted by Britain that criticized Syria's offensive in the town of Qusair. Russia called the draft "unilateral" and "not reflecting the real situation in Syria, particularly in Qusair." On Monday, the Supreme Military Council of the Syrian opposition forces sent a statement to the U.N. Security Council demanding Russia end its efforts to "prevent international intervention" in Syria.

A funeral for a dissident cleric in Iran turned into a massive rally against the government, the BBC reports. Ayatollah Jalaluddin Taheri, 87, was a pro-reform Muslim leader in the city of Isfahan. He was a vocal critic of extremist Islam and of the Iranian regime. His funeral procession turned into a protest, with mourners calling for the release of Iran's reformist Green Movement. A video on Al-Arabiya showed several thousand people in the funeral procession shouting, "Down with the dictator," a reference to Iran's supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei. Tensions had been high prior to the funeral due to the government's pre-elections crackdown on the Green Movement. The movement's leaders have been barred from running in the elections, and two of them have been put under house arrest. Iranian police did not intervene. Authorities may have feared that a police crackdown would harm the ruling party's election campaign. Iran's presidential elections will be held next week.

Fresh violence erupted in Turkey overnight Tuesday, as protesters defied a government plea to end days of deadly unrest. AFP reported that police used tear gas and water cannons on hundreds of protesters, who ignored warnings to disperse in Istanbul, Ankara and the southeastern city of Hatay, where a young protester died a day earlier. "You are being unfair to us, that is enough!" one protester was seen yelling at the police after warnings to quit an area close to Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan's Istanbul office. Erdogan's government earlier won praise from the United States for apologizing to injured protesters, but that concession did not appear to have stemmed popular anger. Thousands gathered at Istanbul's Taksim Square for a sixth day, yelling defiance at Erdogan, who earlier has dismissed the protesters as "extremists" and "vandals".

Some 200 members of Morocco's pro-reform February 20 protest movement gathered outside the justice ministry in Rabat on Wednesday to demand the release of political prisoners, an AFP journalist reported. The protesters were joined by hundreds of unemployed graduates, who hold near-daily demonstrations in the capital. "Free the February 20 activists," and "Peaceful protests are a right," were among the slogans they chanted. "The February 20 movement is peaceful, it has never called for violence. We will continue to protest until our comrades are freed," one of the protesters told AFP. In recent months a group of 18 Moroccan NGOs has called for the release of all political prisoners, among them around 60 activists with the February 20 youth movement which was born out of the Arab Spring protests that erupted across the region in early 2011.

Headline: Latvia gets EU green light to adopt euro currency

Latvia is set to become the 18th member of the eurozone after the European Commission gave its application the green light on Wednesday (5 June). "Latvia douze points is my message to Riga," Olli Rehn, the bloc's economic and monetary affairs commissioner, said while delivering his report, by reference to the scoring system in Europe's annual pop music competition, Eurovision. He welcomed what he described as "a high degree of sustained economic convergence with the euro area." In a nod to the eurozone's critics, Rehn described Latvia's membership bid as "a sign of confidence in our common currency and further evidence that those who predicted the disintegration of the euro area were wrong." EU finance ministers will give their verdict in July.

Headline: France to reform or fall behind rest of Europe, IMF says

The International Monetary Fund on Tuesday downgraded its forecast for the French economy in 2013 and 2014, in more bad news for a country struggling to jumpstart growth and create badly-needed jobs. The eurozone's second largest economy fell into recession in the first quarter of the year and registered a record number of jobseekers in April -- the 24th consecutive month of rising unemployment. French President Francois Hollande has vowed to boost growth and curb the rising unemployment trend by the end of 2013, but as it published its annual evaluation report on France Tuesday, the IMF warned this would be hard. According to the Washington-based organisation, France's GDP will contract by 0.2 percent this year and grow by 0.8 percent in 2014, compared to previous predictions of a 0.1 percent contraction in 2013 and 0.9 percent growth next year.

Headline: Eurozone recovery signs few and far between

A run of economic figures for the 17 European Union countries that use the euro all showed the same thing — growth remains elusive. While Eurostat confirmed Wednesday that the eurozone as a whole — and nine of its 17 members — were in recession at the end of the first quarter, a separate survey from the statistics office showed retail sales falling a monthly 0.5 percent in April. And the monthly survey of sentiment from financial information company Markit pointed to a further contraction in activity during May. The figures paint a fairly grim picture just as the European Central Bank's governing council prepares to discuss what to do to get the ailing eurozone economy growing again. Thursday's policy decision is not expected to yield much, or anything, exciting.

Headline: Does China Plan To Back The Yuan With Gold And Make It The Primary Global Reserve Currency?

Headline: Global shock as manufacturing contracts in US and China

What in the world is China up to? Why are the Chinese hoarding so much gold? Does China plan to back the yuan with gold and turn it into a global reserve currency? Could it be possible that China actually intends for the yuan to eventually replace the U.S. dollar as the primary reserve currency of the planet? Most people in the western world assume that China just wants a "seat at the table" and is content to let the United States run the show. But that isn't the case at all. The truth is that China doesn't just want to compete with the United States. Rather, China actually plans to replace the United States as the dominant economic power on the planet. In fact, China already accounts for more global trade than the United States does. So what would happen one day if China announced that it was backing the yuan with gold and that it would no longer be using the U.S. dollar in international trade? It would cause a financial shift so cataclysmic that it is hard to even imagine. Most of those that write about the "death of the U.S. dollar" usually fail to point out that China is holding a lot of the cards as far as the fate of the dollar is concerned. China owns about a trillion dollars of our debt, China is the second largest economy on the planet, and nobody uses the dollar in international trade more than China does except for the United States. Up until now, China has had to use the U.S. dollar in international trade because there has not been an attractive alternative. But a gold-backed yuan would change all of that very rapidly.

Headline: Food rationing to begin in big Venezuelan state

In a sign Venezuela's food shortages could be worsening, restrictions on the sale of 20 basic items subject to price controls, including toilet paper and chicken, are set to begin next week in its most populous state, officials said Tuesday. A spokesman for President Nicolas Maduro's government said it is incorrect to call the plan rationing because it is meant to fight smuggling of price-controlled food across the border into Colombia. He said there are no plans to extend the program nationally. Details of how the system in Zulia state will work are still being worked out, said Blagdimir Labrador, the state governor's chief of staff. But Zulia will issue computer chip cards beginning next week that will limit consumer purchases of products including rice, flour, cooking oil, sugar and powdered milk, he said. The quantities each family will be allowed to buy, on a daily or weekly basis, have not yet been determined, he said.

Sexually transmitted infections (STIs) are soaring among young people, with chlamydia the most virulent, health officials have warned. Nearly half a million people were diagnosed with STIs last year, with those aged under-25 experiencing the highest rates of infection, according to new figures released today. Health experts have warned that the rise in STIs shows too many young people are still putting themselves at risk by failing to practice safe-sex. Last year there were 448,422 diagnoses, which was a rise of five per cent from 2011, said Public Health England (PHE). Almost half of all infections were chlamydia, amounting to 46 per cent of total STI diagnoses. The number of new gonorrhoea diagnoses increased by 21 per cent, which is a particular cause for concern among health officials as the global threat of antibiotic resistance grows.

Buried in the proposed rewrite of the nation's massive education law are protections for gay and lesbian students that its supporters liken to the landmark 1972 protections for the rights of female athletes in high school and college. Senate Democrats on Tuesday released a 1,150-page revision of the law governing the nation's elementary and secondary schools, formally known as the Elementary and Secondary Education Act but more commonly called No Child Left Behind. In it, they include student nondiscrimination language that, if passed, would threaten schools' funding if gay and lesbian students are bullied or harassed.

Britain's House of Lords Tuesday overwhelmingly rejected an amendment that would have killed gay marriage legislation. The vote was 390-148, The Independent reported. The upper house of Parliament advanced the bill to second reading, defeating what was possibly the last chance for opponents to derail it. Waheed Alli, who sits in the Lords as Baron Alli of Norbury, is a Labor peer and openly gay. He called the vote a "stunning victory for equality." "There can be no doubt that the public, the House of Commons and now the House of Lords are in favor of marriage equality," Alli said. "Those opposed to this Bill should listen to the overwhelming voice of the majority, not just in both Houses of Parliament, but across the country."

Two Catholic and three Christian schools in Gaza could face closure if Hamas really cracks down on an order that bans male-female co-educational program, the head of Latin Patriarchate Schools said. "We will never accept this even if we have to close the schools," Father Hijazin said, in the report.

From January 2013 to date, Sri Lanka saw 30 incidents of persecution against Christian churches, Open Doors USA reports. The perpetrators of such acts were not brought to justice, which encourages the culprits to continue carrying out such violent attacks without regard for the law. In a press release dated April 3, 2013, the National Christian Evangelical Alliance of Sri Lanka (NCEASL) expressed its deep concern over the "prevalence ... of an organized campaign of hatred against adherents of non-majority faiths." NCEASL wrote: "There are two alarming factors about the current situation. The first is that the violence seems to be organized and orchestrated by two organizations. Hence the violence has sustainability. Secondly, and most alarmingly both the extremist violent organizations seemingly have patronage and support from authorities and hence the impunity with which they operate."

You don't need to be Magneto to move a drone with your thoughts — you just need the right kind of headgear. A quadcopter belonging to the University of Minnesota was flown through hoops guided not by a handheld remote control, but by the thoughts of a person sitting nearby. Five test "pilots" recruited by Bin He's bioengineering lab sat at a desk in a gymnasium wearing a skullcap with 64 electrodes, and took turns individually flying the machine up, down, sideways, and through vibrant orange hoops strung from the ceiling. The pilots didn't watch the drone. Instead, as if in a video game, they watched a screen to see what the copter saw via a camera installed on the front of the machine. They controlled the direction of flight by thinking about moving their limbs in the direction they wanted the drone to fly. Thinking about clenching the right or left fist turned the copter in that direction. Thinking about clenching both fists made the drone fly up, and thinking about neither made it drop. June 5, 2013

A 6.1-magnitude earthquake has struck off the Solomon Islands, the US Geological Survey says, but no immediate tsunami warning has been issued. The tremor, at a depth of 64 kilometers, hit in the Santa Cruz Islands, some 89 kilometers south of the remote town of Lata, where a tsunami left at least 10 people dead in February. Geoscience Australia gave a higher preliminary measurement of 6.6-magnitude, but said it was unlikely to have caused a local tsunami in the quake-prone region. “That magnitude may change over time as we get more data,” duty seismologist Spiro Spiliopoulos told AFP, adding that they measured the depth at about 60 kilometers. “Because of its depth and its somewhat smaller size (to the February quake), I would say it’s unlikely to create a tsunami,” he said.

The February tsunami, sparked by an 8.0-magnitude quake, killed at least 10 people, destroyed hundreds of homes and left thousands homeless.

No tsunami was generated but "some areas may have experienced strong shaking," according to the Pacific Tsunami Warning Center in Ewa Beach. Additionally, flood warnings were in effect in the Mississippi Valley from northern Illinois to Louisiana. While the tornado risk appeared to be lower than it was when powerful twisters plagued the area, particularly Oklahoma, weather.com forecasters said pockets of large hail and damaging wind gusts were a concern in the Plains. Early Wednesday, the National Weather Service issued severe thunderstorm warnings for several counties in north-central Oklahoma and south-central Kansas, with severe thunderstorm watches in effect in surrounding areas.

Luke 21:9 and Matthew 24:7 speak of nation against nation and kingdom against kingdom in the end times. Revelation 6:3-4 speaks of the fiery red horse given power to make men slay one another and Revelation 6:8 speaks again of this red horse in conjunction with the pale horse of Death and Hades, as the one that has the power to kill by sword. I like to call this “The Arab Spring in Prophecy” because for us it is easy to identify- that’s what the world calls it.

Luke 21:9: wars & commotions; the Greek word here is Akatastasia, meaning instability, a state of disorder, disturbance, confusion (revolutions)

Matthew 24:7: the Greek word for nation is Ethnos & refers to various ethnic groups fighting among themselves, where the next sentence in the verse refers to kingdoms (basileiva) fighting one another (not to be confused with an actual kingdom but rather the right or authority to rule over a kingdom) I have tried to separate it into areas that sweep EAST from the point of North America.

Elements of the Seleka rebel alliance have attacked a number of villages in the central part of the Central African Republic (CAR), killing dozens of people. "They [Seleka rebels] arrived in three vehicles full of weapons and ammunition and attacked the village," said a merchant who spoke on condition of anonymity. On May 27, a Red Cross worker said that the rebels have killed at least 25 people, including a pregnant woman and a child, in attacks on different villages near the city of Bossangoa. The Seleka rebels launched an offensive against the CAR government in December 2012 and have since been accused of killing the civilians and looting.

As he stepped into the prime minister's job for the third time Wednesday, Nawaz Sharif vowed to improve Pakistan's limping economy and end American drone strikes. It was a nod to the voters who elected a man viewed as a pro-business conservative to tackle problems including a fiscal meltdown, power outages and spillover from the war in neighboring Afghanistan. His success in an office he was forced out of by a military coup in 1999 will hinge on how quickly he can address Pakistanis' most basic needs such as electricity and jobs, but many analysts believe his strong mandate at least gives him a fighting chance at success. "This daily routine of drone attacks, this chapter shall now be closed," Sharif said to widespread applause. "We do respect others' sovereignty. It is mandatory on others that they respect our sovereignty." But he gave few details on how he might end the strikes. Many in Pakistan say the strikes kill large numbers of innocent civilians – something the U.S. denies – and end up breeding more extremism by those seeking retribution.

Headline: Yemenis bury remains of Houthi rebel group

Tens of thousands of Yemeni Shi'ite Muslims chanting "death to America" and "death to Israel" buried the remains of the founder of the armed Houthi rebel group on Wednesday, nine years after he was killed in fighting with government forces. Crowds braved sweltering temperatures and windy conditions in the rugged northern Yemeni mountains as they made their way to the burial site, where armed rebels were deployed in large numbers. The Yemeni government turned over the remains of Hussein al-Houthi to his family earlier this year as a goodwill gesture to bolster national reconciliation talks aimed at drafting a new constitution ahead of elections scheduled next year. The previous government of veteran leader Ali Abdullah Saleh, who stepped down last year after a popular uprising, originally buried Houthi at the central prison in Sanaa to prevent his grave becoming a shrine for the Zaidi sect from which he came.

Headline: Bahrain's Opposition Rejoins Unity Talks

Bahrain's opposition has rejoined national reconciliation talks following a two-week boycott over the slow pace of dialogue and a reported crackdown by security forces. Bahrain's main opposition party al-Wefaq, in collaboration with other opposition forces, announced the boycott on May 22.

The group said the decision came after "hundreds of citizens" were arrested and scores of homes were raided including that of a prominent Shi'ite cleric, Ayatollah Sheikh Issa Qassim. The national dialogue, which began in February, is aimed at resolving roughly two years of political deadlock following a Shi'ite-led, pro-democracy uprising that Bahrain's Sunni government quelled in 2011.

The talks, so far, have yielded minimal results.

Headline: Greeks march in support of Turkish protesters

A few thousands of Greeks have held a rally in the capital in support of the ongoing Turkish protesters against Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan and his government. Greek authorities said the march on Monday was held near the Turkish Embassy in Athens, adding that about 1,500 people attended the event. This comes while others estimate that more than 2,000 participated. "From Taksim Square to Athens, we fight poverty and hunger," chanted the protesters. A similar rally in support of the Turkish protesters was held in the northern city of Thessaloniki on Sunday. Greece's second largest political party Syriza has criticized the use of excessive force by the Turkish police against the protesters and called on the European Union to put pressure on Ankara.
